

Our Contributors

DEBORAH BLIZZARD is an assistant professor in the Department of Science, Technology, and Society/Public Policy and sits on the Women's and Gender Studies Coordinating Committee in the College of Liberal Arts at Rochester Institute of Technology. Her primary research focuses on the development of fetoscopy (in utero fetal surgery) and her teaching utilizes feminist pedagogy where she merges lived experience with theoretical understanding.

ALICIA D. BONAPARTE is a doctoral candidate in Sociology at Vanderbilt University. Her dissertation deals with the demise of granny midwifery in South Carolina.

CHRISTINA FISANICK is an assistant professor of English and writing program director at Xavier University in Cincinnati, Ohio. Her teaching and scholarship focus on embodiment, composition and rhetoric, and memoir. Her most recent work has appeared in The Review of Education, Pedagogy and Culture Studies, the Journal of Advanced Composition, and Feminist Media Studies.

SUSAN FOSTER is a professor in the Department of Research and Teacher Education at the National Technical Institute for the Deaf/Rochester Institute of Technology. While her primary role at the college is as a full-time researcher, she also teaches within the Master's program preparing secondary school teachers of deaf and hard of hearing students. She has published three books and has numerous published articles focused on mainstreaming and access for deaf and hard of hearing persons in school and at work.

SOBEIRA LATORRE writes from the Department of Hispanic Studies at Illinois Wesleyan University.

CHERYL RADELOFF teaches feminist pedagogy, feminist theory, introduction to women's studies, and a coming-of-age course at Mankato State University in Minnesota.

MONICA S. RUSSELL is an undergraduate student, former teaching assistant, and Women's Studies minor at Pennsylvania State University.

NICOLE SEYMOUR is a Ph.D. candidate in English at Vanderbilt University. She is currently writing her dissertation, “Foreign Bodies and Anti-Bodies: Contagion, Production, and Queer Bodily Transformations in Twentieth-Century Texts.” At Vanderbilt, she has taught undergraduate courses in composition, drama, and literary criticism—with an emphasis on eco-criticism and queer theory.

AARONETTE M. WHITE is a feminist psychologist and an assistant professor of Women’s Studies at Pennsylvania State University.

MARCIA WRIGHT-SOIKA is a recent graduate and former teaching assistant and Women’s Studies major at Pennsylvania State University.